HomeLogic – 2004 Innovator of the Year – CE Pro Magazine

Marblehead, MA – December 7, 2004: HomeLogic, LLC announced it has been recognized with a key industry award. HomeLogic was awarded one of the CE Pro High Impact Product of the Year Awards for Home Control. Further, The Editors of CE Pro Magazine singled out HomeLogic as the “2004 Innovator of the Year” for their OneHome Management and Control Solution. This is the third award presented to HomeLogic in the first year of product launch.

“Picking the most important products of the year is no small task. That’s why we ask our readers to select them. For the third year in a row, we polled thousands of CE Pro readers, who gave the case for their favorite time-saving, money-making, customer-pleasing high-impact products of the year. These products have all been sold, installed, and tested in the field. Some of them are wildly original creations. Others are simply practical gizmos that cost less or enable dealers to get particularly creative” writes Julie Jacobson, Editor of CE Pro Magazine.

Ms. Jacobson continues “HomeLogic appears to be doing things right. Similar companies have failed because they asked integrators to do too much. HomeLogic, on the other hand, provides a turnkey system including a cabinet, its own server, touch-screens, and a variety of EdgeBrick adapters configured with drivers for the most popular subsystems.”

“We are honored to be recognized. The Homelogic team has been working hard to deliver easy to install, use, and support home management and control solutions for about three years. Winning this award in the first year of our formal launch is a nice pat on back for our development team” stated HomeLogic co-founder Buddy Duncan. “We would like to thank our dealers who provided the kind feedback that led to this award and are truly honored to be recognized by one of our industry’s leading organizations”.
